First Light Media Publishing Releases more Than 15 New Programs

Los Angeles, California -- First Light Media Publishing is proud to announce the release of their new Spring 2005 catalog featuring more than 300 instructional VHS videos, DVDs and selected CD-ROM's. This is the most comprehensive and detailed catalog of educational media ever assembled for mass communication and media arts instruction, from a single source.

Virtually all aspects of media studies (acting, directing, writing, production, lighting, radio production & broadcasting, multi-media, digital imaging, set design, editing, etc.) are presented, featuring experienced, accomplished professionals in their respective fields.

The catalog features more than a dozen new programs including the highly anticipated Academy Of Television Arts and Sciences Foundation presentation: Journeys Below the Line - The Editing Process of 24, an ideal teaching tool for production and mass communication classes and for students wishing to enter the TV business. This all new program goes behind the scenes of the popular Fox TV series 24 and emphasizes the unique jobs that contribute to the distinctive editorial look and style of the series.

Other newly released media arts educational programs include: Beginning Film & Video Making: Camera & Lenses, Film School in a Box, Creating an Effective Television Story, Script to Screen, and Basic Field Production: Sound Recording and Lighting.

For an on line listing of First Light Media Publishing programs, please visit the website, www.firstlightvideo.com . A PDF version of the catalog is available on the site.
